Scouting in Ghana started in 1912 as a Branch of The Scout Association. In 1960 the Ghana Scout Association became a direct member of the World Organisation of the Scout Movement (WOSM).

Brong Ahafo region and the Greater Accra have also received skill training in farming and they are making good use of it in their various regions.

The Ghana Scout Association has been encouraging its members to include more community services among their Scout activities. The Scouts help the community by getting the people to talk about their needs and then the Scouts help the people to carry out the projects, such as building health centres, new schools or community centres, digging wells and erecting market shed. In most cases the Scouts start the project and later they convince the people to join in, when it can be made clear that the scheme will benefit the community and not just the Scouts. In parts of Ghana there are few trees and lots of open spaces with very little shade; therefore in the north of the country Scouts have planted shade trees and they have advised people to plant trees around their houses to protect them, and to avoid storms destroying their homes. A wire – weaving venture has been established to give employable skills to scouts in the region as well.

Sea Scouts in Ghana helped to run fish raising stations under the nation's "Operation Feed Yourself Programme". When traffic changed from driving on the left hand side to the right, the Scouts helped to make the change over as smooth as possible, by directing traffic thereby preventing many a mishap. Rovers and Leaders do many community services in cities and urban towns - for instance in Accra, the capital, they repair, damaged roads by filling in pot holes; they also visit churches and hospitals, they help desilt choked gutters and clean certain towns and sensitise the residents on the need to keep their environment clean always etc. to render services free of charge and encourage such residents to join the movement, since there are more to benefit in scouting than the cleaning of the areas. In recent times, scouts have adopted the theme "pick up rubbish, don't drop any" and occasionally visit targeted areas (principal streets and slum areas) exercising this theme together with the inhabitants. Scouts have also created a rapport with orphanages in and around Accra through clean-up exercise and donations to the orphanages. Cub Scouts visit kindergartens to

Scouts and their leaders receive training through various courses and programmes at the National Training Centre at Sakyikrom near Nsawam in the Eastern Region of Ghana. Village Health Patrols are also trained there who speak to people especially those in the villages on how to protect themselves from acquiring the HIV/AIDS virus. This exercise is very popular among the Volta Region Scouts. Scouts in the Ashanti region,
