Scouting was first introduced to Japan by a professor in Hiroshima College in 1909. However, it was not until 1915 that Scouting started to spread around the country. The Federation of Boy Scouts of Japan was formed in 1922 and became one of the founding members of the International Scout Conference. In 1944, due to the war, the Federation was dissolved, but Scouting continued. After the war in 1946, the National Association of the Boys Scouts of Nippon was established and resumed the full membership of the World Scout Conference in 1951.

In 1971, Japan was host to the 13th World Scout Jamboree which was held at Asagiri Heights in the foothills of Mount Fuji. The Jamboree was attended by 23,758 Scouts from 87 countries. The 23rd World Scout Conference was held in Tokyo after the World Jamboree.

The National Association was re-named as Scout Association of Japan (SAJ) in 1995. SAJ has opened the doors to the girls/female youth in all Sections at the same time.

A National Jamboree is held in Japan every four years, attended by Scouts from all over the world. For older Scouts named Venture Scouts, a National Camp called "Nippon Venture" is held every four years between National Jamborees since 1983. Scouting in Japan has four training sections for the boys and girls.

Beaver Scout aged 6-8

Cub Scouts aged 8 - 11 years

Scouts aged 11 - 14 years

Venture Scouts aged 14 - 18 years

Rovers aged 18 - 24 years

The first four sections have a progressive badge system. The first badge in each section is for "orientation", to allow a new member a period in which he can learn about the section.

To develop individuals' own interest and specialties, each section has a choice of Proficiency Badges.
